Our model of care

Living with a complex condition means that you need a comprehensive approach to treatment. We believe this approach should look at your MS from every angle; treating, supporting and helping you live with all aspects of the condition, whether physical, emotional or cognitive.

We know from both research and experience that the best way to do this is through a range of professionals with different skillsets and specialisms who all work together in a close-knit team. This 'multi-disciplinary' approach is the core to our clinic's model of care.

There are lots of different ways to manage MS, and we'll find the right one for you, in line with your life choices, values and goals. This might include drug treatments for individual symptoms or relapses, changes to nutrition or movement, or complementary and alternative therapies.

If you are living with MS but have concerns over either your diagnosis, the management of your condition or the way your MS is impacting your life, a visit to our clinic might be helpful.
